Jethro as the Patriarch of Administration and Management: An Analysis of His Works

O. Jason Osai¹, Lucky U.M. Eleanya², Justin M. Orukwownu³ and Nelson V.C. Okene⁴

1. Institute of Foundation Studies (IFS), Rivers State University of Science & Technology, PMB 5080, Port Harcourt, Nigeria GSM: 00037851138; Email: jasonosai@yahoo.com
2. Department of Social Sciences, Rivers State College of Arts and Science, PMB 5936, Port Harcourt, Nigeria
3. Department of Management, Faculty Management, Rivers State University of Science & Technology, PMB 5080, Port Harcourt, Nigeria
4. Department of Political and Administrative Studies, Faculty of Social Sciences, University of Port Harcourt, Choba, Port Harcourt, Nigeria

ABSTRACT Pioneer theorists in the academic fields of administration and management are known by certain appellations that are reflective of their contributions towards the history, evolution and development of administration and management thought. Resultantly, Robert Owen is called the “Father of Personnel Management” while Frederick Taylor is known as the “Father of Scientific Management;” in same vein, Henri Fayol is called the “Father of Modern Management” and Max Weber is known as the “Father of Bureaucracy.” The paper reviews the admonitions of Jethro (the priest of Midan), to Moses (his son-in-law), within the precepts of contemporary administration, management and organizational theories and practice. The paper posits that Jethro is the “Patriarch of Management;” and this is supported by a detailed analysis of Jethro’s words as contained in the literature of Judeo-Christian theology vis-à-vis the postulates of Owen, Taylor, Fayol, and Weber, which are predated by the words of Jethro by more than three thousand years.