

Social Forestry in India: A Perpetuation of Dependency

Jyotsna Bapat

Department of Sociology, Bombay University, Bombay 400 098, Maharashtra, India

KEYWORDS Ecology. Social Forestry. Dependency Approach. Maharashtra

ABSTRACT The paper suggests a dependency approach to understand the situation of Indian forests. It argues that a dependency approach will be an improvement over a purely Marxian approach, because it has a better descriptive component, secondly, it is able to incorporate the recent trends related to social forestry and finally, it has better predictive powers.