

Incidence of PTC Tasters and Defective Colour Vision among The Koch of West Garo Hills, Meghalaya, North East India

Murali Kotal

Anthropological Survey of India, North East Regional Centre, Upper Lachumiere, Shillong 793 001, Meghalaya, India

KEYWORDS Genetic Markers. Variation. Koch. Meghalaya

ABSTRACT A study of PTC taste perception and defective colour vision was carried out among the Koch in West Garo Hills district of Meghalaya, North-East India. It was found that the frequency of taster gene (T) among the Koch is 0.4437 and percentage frequency of red-green colour blindness was 3.6.