

Family Size and Undergraduates' Attitude towards Cultism: Implication for Counselling

Agnes Ebi Maliki

*Department of Educational Foundations, Niger Delta University, P.M.B.071, Wilberforce Island, 560001, Bayelsa State, Nigeria
E-mail: agnesmaliki@yahoo.com*

KEYWORDS Cultism. Attitude. Family Size. Undergraduates

ABSTRACT Parents have divine and social responsibilities to bring up and train the child to be an acceptable, responsible, promising and successful human being. This paper sought to investigate the influence of family size and undergraduates' attitudes towards cultism. The population of undergraduates were 5,002. The sample of the study was 605 undergraduates randomly selected from eleven faculties of the Niger Delta University. The result revealed that family size significantly influence students attitude towards cultism. Counselling implications were suggested.