

Full text open access online (Since 1997)

© JSS 2022

PRINT: ISSN 0971-8923 ONLINE: ISSN 2456-6756

J Soc Sci, 73(1-3): 1-7 (2022)

DOI: 10.31901/24566756.2022/73.1-3.2297

Role of Non-governmental Organisations to Tackle Child Labour in India: A Review

Navpreet Kaur* and Shobha Gulati

Lovely Professional University, Phagwara, Punjab, India

E-mail: navpreetmomi@gmail.com, Orcid: <https://orcid.org/0000-0003-2335-0700>*

KEYWORDS Child. Labour. Social Issues. Factors. Reasons

ABSTRACT This paper is based on non-governmental organisations (NGOs) working to eradicate child labour in India. Due to the high rate of poverty and rapid population growth, child labour is hired to work in fields, factories, mines, as domestic servants or maids, or street vendors. The objectives of this study are to discuss the various NGOs working on the protection of child labour rights and to identify issues faced by NGOs during the rescue and rehabilitation of children. The methodology adopted in this paper is based on primary and secondary sources. The study is based on both theoretical and empirical data. The required source material for preparing this paper will be collected from journals, newspaper papers, research papers, and websites. The survey method is adopted for the field study. The researchers conclude that NGOs work effectively to eliminate child labour in India. They organise programs to spread awareness about child labour. But they also face trouble while doing so.